Southeast Georgia Health System Presents BEE Award to Brandi Still

BRUNSWICK, Georgia: January 4, 2024 – Southeast Georgia Health System recently presented the BEE Award to Brandi Still, CNA, in recognition for the compassionate care she provides to patients. The BEE Award honors and recognizes team members outside of nursing who go Beyond Exceptional Expectations (BEE).

A certified nursing assistant in the Health System's Brunswick Campus medical/surgical/oncology unit, Still was nominated for the BEE Award by fellow team members as well as one of her patients.

One nomination excerpt included, "Brandi is a team member who absolutely embodies the spirit of the BEE Award. Her bedside manner is remarkable. She is very respectful, responsible and exhibits compassion toward patients."

Another peer nomination stated that Still sets a good example to other team members. "I was amazed by how clean and tidy Brandi's patients were. Everyone's needs were attended to. Her patients were showered or bathed and she made sure everyone had eaten. She is very organized and efficient in her job and she always smiles at the nurses and the patients even though her job is not easy. She is hardworking and a very good example for other CNAs. I am just very happy and inspired to have worked with her. She is also very humble and friendly."

A patient's nomination reported that Still made their week-long stay in the hospital much more comforting. "She goes beyond her job. She is interested in the patients and helping to make them whole."

According to her nurse manager, Shelli McKinney, RN, "Brandi's heart is in the job and I am so excited she is being recognized!"

Still was presented with a BEE Award plaque and certificate in front of her peers and Health System leadership. She also received a BEE pin, balloons, and honey danishes to share with her team.

Those eligible for the BEE Award include all Health System team members and volunteers except nurses (RNs and LPNs may receive the DAISY Award). These team members provide extraordinary experiences for Health System patients, their families and visitors by exemplifying quality service and care.

Anyone may nominate a deserving team member for a BEE Award online at sghs.org/bee-award, or nominations may be placed in BEE boxes located throughout the Health System's Brunswick and Camden campuses. A committee of Health System team members review the nominations and determine the BEE Award recipient(s).
