AdventHealth Redmond hosts Topping Out ceremony for new Heart and Vascular Center

Rome, Georgia — AdventHealth Redmond marked a major milestone in the construction of its new Heart and Vascular Institute with a traditional Topping Out ceremony on August 13.

Leadership and team members from AdventHealth Redmond and Brasfield & Gorrie, LLC gathered to participate in the ceremonial placement of the final steel beam, a time-honored tradition in construction that symbolizes the completion of a building's structural framework. The final beam placement signifies not only the physical rise of a new facility but also the elevation of heart care for the Rome-Floyd County community and beyond.

"This Heart and Vascular Institute will be a place where skill meets compassion, where innovation meets dedication, and where lives are saved and changed every single day," said Isaac Sendros, president and CEO of AdventHealth Georgia and AdventHealth Redmond. "Together, we're not just constructing a medical office building; we're building a legacy of hope, healing, and excellence in heart care for generations to come, for this community we love."

The new Heart and Vascular Institute is designed to bring together leading-edge technology, expert clinicians, and a whole-person care philosophy that reflects AdventHealth's mission to extend the healing ministry of Christ. Once completed, the facility will offer expanded services, streamlined access to care, and a healing environment that supports patients and families throughout their heart care journey.
