AdventHealth Gordon to Host Free Maternity Fair for Expecting and New Parents

AdventHealth Gordon is inviting community members who are planning for pregnancy, expecting a baby or adjusting to life with a newborn to attend its upcoming free Maternity Fair on Sunday, Sept. 27, from 2 to 4 p.m. in Conference Rooms A and E at AdventHealth Gordon's North Entrance. The event is designed to provide education, resources and support for families at every stage of their maternity journey.

The Maternity Fair will offer attendees the opportunity to connect with AdventHealth's maternity care team, learn about available services and gain trusted guidance related to pregnancy, childbirth and postpartum care.

Participants will have access to vendor and exhibit booths, maternity education resources, tours of The Baby Place, a panel featuring maternity experts, giveaways, door prizes and light refreshments.

"We are excited to welcome families from across our community to this special event," said Lauren Everett, director of The Baby Place at AdventHealth Gordon. "Whether someone is planning to grow their family, preparing for the arrival of a baby or navigating life with a newborn, our goal is to provide support, education and resources that help parents feel informed and confident every step of the way."

The fair reflects AdventHealth Gordon's commitment to supporting families through compassionate, whole-person care before, during and after childbirth. Attendees will have the opportunity to meet members of the maternity team, ask questions and learn more about the personalized care available close to home.

Space is limited, and advance registration is required. For more information or to register, community members can use the event registration QR code available on promotional materials or click
