AdventHealth Redmond Hosts Regional Cardiovascular Symposium to Advance Heart Health Across Northwest Georgia

AdventHealth Redmond recently welcomed healthcare professionals from across the region for the 2026 Northwest Georgia Cardiovascular Symposium, a day dedicated to advancing cardiovascular care through education, collaboration and innovation.

The symposium brought together physicians, clinicians and healthcare leaders to explore the latest developments in heart and vascular medicine, highlighting evidence-based practices and emerging technologies designed to improve patient outcomes and enhance the patient experience.

Throughout the event, AdventHealth physicians and clinical leaders shared expertise on a broad range of topics impacting cardiovascular health, including atrial fibrillation management, advanced cardiac imaging, cardiac rehabilitation, heart failure treatment, stroke care and coronary artery disease. Presenters also discussed innovative approaches that are helping shape the future of cardiovascular medicine and improve care delivery throughout the region.

The annual symposium serves as an opportunity for healthcare professionals to strengthen partnerships, exchange ideas and learn about the latest innovations that can help improve outcomes for patients with cardiovascular disease.

As a leader in cardiovascular care, AdventHealth Redmond continues to invest in clinical excellence, advanced technology and physician collaboration to meet the growing healthcare needs of the communities it serves.
